The following is a partial rendition of the speech entitled A More Perfect Union delivered by the 44th United States President, Barack Obama, on March 18, 2008 in Philadelphia, PA . . . Belief in You . . . Great thanks . . . For the opportunity to address race and inequality within our social ranks . . . Great thanks . . . For the opportunity to speak to great think tanks before our perfect union-based belief could sink . . . Great thanks . . . For Mr. Wofford and his considerate construction of today's introduction and for great works like that of a citizen's contribution that will serve as a societal solution . . . We the people, in order to form a more perfect union was the declared decree that remains to be the two hundred and twenty one year old dream yet to be fully-forged into a reality . . . The seed-sower, student, as well as statesman and their supporter sought to sustain strength and stretch securities seen as somewhat shorter . . . From the 1787 Philadelphia convention to the times of now that continue to mention how and why the independent came to agree that all of America deserves to be free and awarded its democratic degree . . . They drafted a document that was designed to insert a democratic dent in divisions and dissents that disregarded the disgruntled and their discernment within discussions about what enslaving truly meant . . . Yet, America had to endure another twenty years of being disturbed and disgusted due to the U.S. Constitution's tenets not being trusted . . . Finding liberty and justice, for one and all, was played out like a game of hide-n-seek while practitioners of enslaved theories practiced making the enslaved weak . . . There were written words of wisdom that underlined the worth of freedom . . . There were written words of wisdom for why the window of equality endowed us with an opportunity that's been widened by Trinity's Kingdom . . . Generation after generation, we've witnessed the strong and their sacrifices within a social struggle, as they searched to seize America's Liberty Blanket that'll sustain a struggle . . . Our campaign objectives are crystal-clear to remember America's parents, peer, and the next generations dear who's soon to appear . . . Monumental movements with few digressions because we all desire more progressions than any reiterations of past regressions . . . Motivating mantras that'll always speak what is seen between a unilateral union and speckled synergy that's super-supreme clean fuel for America's make-over machine . . . America always needs a diverse universe to deliver such deeds like social actions supported by political reactions that'll discourage degrading distractions and encourage more cultural interactions . . . We have a desire, that burns deep within our souls like fire, to build an unbreakable bridge of belief that many more can admire . . . Through our living examples, we stand to proclaim that we have similarities and a story that's somewhat the same . . . Like an interracial marriage that births a biracial baby boy who later attends the best schools to learn how to begin blueprints that broker a broad-based perspective to bolster or embolden even the broken with disbelief . . . Like the brainiac who scores off the chart when he marries his suitable counterpart . . . Like a king and queen who manages tasks to include cooks and cleans . . . Like family planners, with baby on board banners, concerned with confirmations . . .
